

From: peter gillespie
To: Microsoft ATR
Date: 11/17/01 2:25pm
Subject: re: microsoft settlement

Dear DoJ, I think the proposed settlement is woefully inadequate to provide any relief to the billions of consumers who have been victims of this machiavellian monopoly. It is estimated that the monopoly effect on the price of Windows is around $20.00 per copy. An adequate remedy would start with a full reimbursement together with triple damages for all purchasers, of which I am sure Microsoft has very thorough records. Then it would address the contemptuous behavior Microsoft and its ceo toward the prior judgement in this case and the judicial process in general and provide substantial incentives to correct their behavior in the future. Anything less condones the type of behavior Mr. Gates displayed in the depositions that were introduced at trial.

sincerely peter gillespie